GENERAL		While the Palestinian experience and narrative has validity, so does the Israeli narrative, and while they may conflict, they can both be true and valid at the same time. Endorsing or validating BDS, or the Palestinian viewpoint alone without a larger context of both narratives creates a one-sided viewpoint that fails to acknowledge the Jewish community's struggle for self-determination and re-establishment of a homeland. Failing to acknowledge the broad and diverse set of cultures and religions in the Middle East and their interactions with each other, as well as with powers outside of the region creates a risk of allowing Anti-Semitism, Islamophobia and discrimination against each of these cultures into the curriculum.
GENERAL		Anti-Semitism is still a very real issue in this country, it should be included on the list of other discriminatory viewpoints that should be addressed in this curriculum, as should Jews generally, who make up 2% of the state population and have a history of being discriminated against through quotas, restrictive covenants and other exclusionary policies.
