

Dear Commission,

The obvious problem is that those who came up with an antisemitic and historically inaccurate curriculum are still there. The makeup of the Instructional Quality Commission has not changed, with no resignations being submitted after an embarrassing curriculum was submitted for review. Many of the committee members are active teachers who, presumably, look unfavorably towards Jews.

The much-maligned History Alive! text used by many school districts is bad enough, yet that content is understandable when learning which foreign country financially influenced the curriculum. There is no excuse for a new ethnic studies curriculum to promote a narrative that is biased, historically inaccurate, and bereft of context.

Harry Beck

Sent from my iPhone